

MOTHER, TOT BURN TO DEATH

Clyde Barr Confesses Using Bank Funds

Farm Is Scene Of Explosion Of Kerosene

Mrs. Ernest Large, 27, and Child, 14 Months Old, Die Within Three Hours After Mother Tries To Start Fire With Coal Oil.

Mrs. Nellie May Large, aged 27, and her 14-months-old child, Ralph Wendell, are dead at the Kirkpatrick Funeral Home in New Holland Wednesday following a terrible disaster which occurred at 4:30 p. m. Tuesday when kerosene with which the mother was attempting to start a fire exploded. The child, who was sitting on the floor in front of the stove, is burned about the face and head, nearly beyond recognition.

The mother is burned from the mouth down and her body is reported to be in terrible condition.

The child died on the lawn at the home within one-half hour after the accident and the mother lived until about 7:30 p. m., three hours after the disaster occurred. She was conscious until the end.

SOUTH OF VILLAGE
Mrs. Large and her child lived with her husband, Ernest Large and another son, Robert, aged 5, on the Joe Bennett farm, three miles south of New Holland.

The accident is said to have occurred when Mrs. Large started to pour kerosene into the stove in order to kindle a fire to get supper for the family. The kerosene exploded flying over Mrs. Large and onto the floor igniting the clothing of the child.

The fire spread about the kitchen, burning paper on the walls, destroying the table cloth and burning a large hole in the floor.

A child thought to be about 14 years old, whose name cannot be learned, was going to the Large home when he heard the explosion. He rushed into the house, dragged the body of the mother and carried the child into the yard and placed them on a blanket he picked up off the bed. He then ran to the pump and pumped water into a bucket which he threw about the kitchen and in a few minutes had the fire out.

YOUTH LEAVES
He is then said to have run to the home of a neighbor about a quarter of a mile from the scene of the disaster, to summon aid.

When the excitement of the explosion had subsided the child had gone to his home and Wednesday no one knew his name, although he is thought to have been a relative of the family.

It is reported that the fatal kerosene was purchased last Saturday.

Robert, aged 5, the deceased woman's other child, was playing in the yard at the time of the fire and ran into a nearby field to call his father, who rushed to the scene to find his child and wife lying in the yard.

The child died before medical aid could be rendered.

Mrs. Large was born in Clarksburg on July 3, 1903, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Newton Ater. She had removed with her husband to the Bennett farm shortly over a year ago, according to residents of New Holland.

She is survived by her husband and one son, Robert; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Newton Ater, Clarksburg, and several brothers and sisters.

Double funeral services will be held at the Clarksburg Methodist Episcopal church Thursday at 2 p. m. with burial in Brown Chapel cemetery by A. W. Kirkpatrick of New Holland.

Just 23 years ago, in 1907, the same vicinity was the scene of a like occurrence when the mother of Harry Mitchell and three of her children were killed by an explosion of kerosene.

DEATH TOLL REACHES 7

Detroit In Midst of Underworld War—Hotel Manager Killed Tuesday.

DETROIT, July 9.—A slaying in the Ocean View Yacht Club, which police say, is a "blind-pig," today brought the underworld murder toll for the last six days to a total of seven persons.

A man, who has been identified as Louis Candea, manager of the Tremont Hotel, was shot and killed in the Yacht Club early today and John DeFord, alleged operator of the fashionable furnished "blind-pig," was shot in the hand trying to prevent the slaying.

Candea was drinking at the bar when a stranger entered. The gunman drew two guns and put the hotel manager "on the spot," he made good an escape.

The epidemic of gangster murders started last Thursday night when William Cannon and George Collins, "small-time" Chicago racketeers, were shot and killed as they sat in an automobile in front of a local hotel.

Patrolmen Barney Roth and John Meitz, the latter a bootlegger, were "put on the spot" two days later when two unknown gunmen invaded Roth's home at Hamtramck and shot and killed both of the men.

Climaxing the murders was the dual slaying of Joseph and Samuel Gaglio, brothers, and alleged bootleggers, whose lives were snuffed out by the bullets from a sub-machine gun as they were putting air into the tires of their automobile in front of a filling station.

The Bay View Club is on the waterfront at Ecorse, a Detroit suburb and purported center of liquor running activities from Canada.

All the murders have baffled police.

ARREST MAN FOR AUTO STEALING

Culprit Who Stole Car After Getting Ride, Held By Athens Police.

Charles Hunter, residence unknown, is being held by Athens authorities on a charge of stealing an automobile from Robert Taylor, Waverly youth, who says he was held up when he offered the man a ride south of this city, and his car was taken from him.

The holdup occurred on June 24 when Taylor was driving a new Ford from Columbus to his home. He became separated from the others in the fleet and when he had driven to a point near Kings-ton he stopped to pick up a man who "thumbed" a ride. When the party had progressed for several miles, the passenger held Taylor up, tied him to a tree and took his car.

Athens police are also holding the car.

Doc Spindler Wife, In Jail After Chase

Charge of Transporting, Possession and Reckless Driving To Be Placed By Fissell and Porter—Six Shots Are Fired In Chase.

Mr. and Mrs. Pearl "Doc" Spindler of S. Pickaway-st., are being held in the county jail pending a hearing on charges of possessing intoxicating liquor, of transporting liquor, and possibly reckless driving, following a chase which covered many miles and took much time starting shortly after 1 a. m. Wednesday.

CHASE THROUGH TOWN

Mr. and Mrs. Spindler, who removed here about eight months ago from Toledo, were captured by Deputy Sheriffs Carl Porter and Miller Fissell after a chase in which six bullets were fired and in which nearly the entire south end of the city was aroused from dreams at shortly after midnight.

Porter and Fissell were cruising in the sheriff's office Chevrolet sedan at midnight when they spied the DeSoto driven by Spindler speeding toward Circleville on the Adelphi-pk near the Joe Smith farm.

The deputies gave chase to the DeSoto and the chase continued through many of the city's streets and finally onto Clinton-st. The officers tried to block Spindler's path at Clinton and Mound-st. but the driver of the DeSoto turned around them and sped down Clinton-st. The authorities report that at this time Mrs. Spindler tossed a jug from the car which they found contained liquor.

SHOOT TIRE
They chased Spindler farther and Fissell shot a warning shot at the fleeing couple. And again a jug was tossed from the DeSoto.

It is reported that while the cars were speeding down Clinton, Spindler tried to wreck the sheriff's car but failed. Fissell again shot warning bullets and finally a third one.

Spindler still refused to stop. Fissell then shot a bullet into the rear fender and followed it with one in the gasoline tank. He

HUSTON CASE HOLDS SWAY

Report That Vermont Offered Job Flatly Denied By White House.

WASHINGTON, July 9.—What political Washington now humorously terms "the strange case of Claudius" Huston" became even more complicated today when the White House was impelled to issue an official denial that the chairmanship of the Republican national committee had been offered to Earl S. Kinsley, the member from Vermont.

Kinsley was represented in his Vermont home as having been offered the chairmanship by President Hoover, but the White House issued a pitiful little statement of ten words, as follows:

"The president has had no communication with Mr. Kinsley whatsoever."

Thus the situation rested today, with the executive members of the committee scheduled to meet here tomorrow at the call of Chairman Huston.

In most quarters the expectation prevails that Huston will announce his retirement after considerable persuasion by his colleagues. Huston himself refuses to deny or affirm that he will resign. He answers all questions with: "I have nothing to say."

Pressure for the removal or resignation of Huston has been acute among party leaders since the senate lobby committee turned up his lobbying activities in behalf of the Union Carbide company, which sought control of Muscle Shoals, and the revelation that Huston temporarily diverted funds he received in this work to his private brokerage account in New York.

Amanda Bank Closes After Deficit Found

Defalcation Totalling $45,000 Discovered By State Banking Officials—Cashier For 25 Years Admits Playing Stock Market, Report.

Clyde Barr, prominent resident of Amanda, and well known favorably in this city, is being held by authorities facing a charge of embezzlement following the closing of the Farmers' and Merchants' Bank at Amanda Tuesday afternoon by state bank authorities.

SHORT $45,000
State bank examiners ordered Barr arrested after they found a shortage of $45,000 in the accounts of the institution.

It is reported that Barr confessed to taking the money which he used in dealing with stocks, through which he has suffered great loss.

Barr, who has been connected with the bank for nearly 25 years, waived examination at a preliminary hearing and was released under $10,000 bond after being held to the grand jury on embezzlement charges.

Bank examiners had been to Amanda for several days, checking the books and when one of the examiners left, reported no shortage. He returned a short time later with another examiner and ordered Sheriff Shesler of Fairfield to place Barr under arrest.

The capitalization of the bank is $25,000 and the surplus is $46,000.

Barr has been a resident of the vicinity of Amanda for practically his entire life. He is married and is the father of one child, a boy aged about 12 years.

PRESIDENT SURPRISED
S. H. Simon, president of the institution, declared that he had no statement to make concerning the closing of the bank and, except that he was never so surprised in his life as when he learned of Barr's arrest.

According to officials of the Luthansa, Miss Northrup was the only woman passenger aboard the plane. No record was made of her residence, but officials distinctly remembered handling her passport. She was described as blonde and about twenty-five years of age.

Conflicting reports were current concerning the fate of the craft and its passengers. While it was stated in some quarters that five of the eight passengers and crew had been lost another report declared all aboard the plane had been rescued by the Dutch steamer Spes, a vessel having no wireless equipment.

In the meantime, four German destroyers and a Swedish motor cutter continued their search for the missing plane.

SHOCKS DEALT PROHIBITION IN YEAR NOT FEW

Literary Poll, Morrow Election, Many Others Cause
Stir in Dry Circles.

WASHINGTON, July 9—The series of shocks dealt prohibition in the past year—The Literary Digest Poll, the Morrow victory in New Jersey, both parties in the state of Washington declaring for repeal in their platforms, to mention only a few—has caused some of the dry leaders here to view the future with considerable pessimism.

Frank recognition that the situation is not as the dry organizations would have it, even with the transfer of enforcement to the Department of Justice and the undoubted efforts of the administration to tighten up, was made today by Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, general secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism, and one of the able lieutenants of the late Wayne B. Wheeler in the long fight to put the Eighteenth Amendment into the constitution.

In a remarkable blunt statement, Dr. Cherrington declared that prohibition is only being kept alive by the dry organizations.

"Prohibition," he said, "would be erased from the constitution and quickly blotted from the statute books if the organized efforts of its friends should cease."

"Should the friends of prohibition abandon those organizations through which alone they present an effective front to the enemy, the liquor consumption in this country would unquestionably far exceed any record set in the past."

GIRL IS LOST AS AIRPLANE FALLS IN SEA

Foreign Authorities Believe Victim Is American About 25, Named Northup.

BERLIN, July 9—A graphic description of the drowning of a woman passenger, believed to be an American, when a disabled Lufthansa hydro-airplane capsized in the Baltic sea, was given to the police of Stralsund today.

The informant was the captain of a Baltic vessel which aided in the rescue of some of the passengers when the crippled plane turned turtle. Latest reports said five persons were lost, including a Miss Northup and a Mr. Burkholder, both Americans.

The plane was forced down by engine trouble while enroute from Stettin to Kalmer, Sweden. The captain of the steamer said he came upon the scene of the wreck and saw a woman, boyed up by a lifebelt, fighting the waves near the disabled plane.

The crew of the vessel grappled for the woman with a boat-hook, and finally succeeded in attaching it to her life-belt. As she was being hauled aboard, however, the lifebelt broke and she sank immediately.

According to officials of the Lufthansa, Miss Northup was the only woman passenger aboard the plane. No record was made of her residence, but officials distinctly remembered handling her passport. She was described as blonde and about twenty-five years of age.

LETTERS TO EDITOR

By J. W. J.

For some fourteen years, now, the writer has been a citizen of Circleville and Pickaway county. Shortly after his advent, a local Chamber of Commerce was organized, which has functioned in a more or less efficient manner ever since. Most of that time it has made an effort to improve the material and, shall I say, the moral welfare of both city and country. It has joined hands with other civic organizations in efforts to provide additional industries to the end that labor might not go unemployed and that, through wage-earners and spenders, a local circulation might be built up and maintained. It ought to be remarked, perhaps, that if our civic bodies have made one mistake more outstanding than another, it has been in the matter of safe-guarding the going industries—utilities and concerns already in our possession. That some of these have been neglected, goes without saying. At all events, this city and county are now face to face with the cold, blooded, indisputable fact, to wit, that we are about to lose two of our railroads, the Pennsylvania and the Scioto Valley Traction Line, and they are being destroyed with not a single hand raised in defense. Some years ago, every citizen in the county was an enthusiastic proponent of their building and establishment and rightfully so; believing that they would contribute to convenient and valuable transportation, to say nothing of the tax revenue which would necessarily accrue to Pickaway county at large. That prophecy, in respect to these roads, has been fulfilled in a very large measure during all these years of operation.

But what is happening now in respect to these essential utilities and that, too, without a peep from the Chamber of Commerce, other organizations or individual citizens. The bus hordes not unlike the plagues of Egypt, and which already cover the land from ocean to ocean and from the lakes to the gulf, sweep down upon these pioneer utilities and "hogging" the roads which they have not assisted in building and which they do not materially assist in maintaining. Literally wipe them from the face of the earth.

According to the records at the Pickaway county auditor's office, the loss of these two railway lines, will mean a yearly loss in taxes, alone, of nearly $20,000; a loss in five years of nearly, if not quite, a $100,000 in taxes; and in the course of a dozen years which soon roll around, a loss in taxes of well on to a quarter of a million dollars, heretofore counted upon to assist in defraying the cost of county government. And mind you, when these railways are destroyed, the deficit becomes perpetual.

But when these roads go out of operation, there are other losses to be considered. There is the real estate depreciation to be taken into account. During all the past years of city and rural development, owners with property for sale, in either city or country, could point the prospective purchaser to our splendid railway outlet, north and south and east and west, thereby enhancing its value and influencing a price not otherwise obtainable. Moreover, if eventually, the Pennsylvania abandons its freight service, that fact will not only remove a competitor for Farm Bureau and other patronage, but will remove also, a convenient connection with Pittsburgh and other markets.

And finally, let it not be overlooked that to defray the cost of local government we have needed

HUNGARY TO HAVE KING ERE YEAR ENDS, GENERAL OPINION

BUDAPEST. — Pick your own date for the taking over of the now vacant Hungarian throne by one of the several candidates. And while you are about it, you might pick your own candidate, as well. That is the favorite sport, indoors and out of doors, of the royal-minded of Hungary, of the chancelleries of her balkan neighbors, and of many others in high European society today.

That someone, sometime, is going to occupy the vacant throne is a certainty—Everyone says so. But who it will be, and when it will be, seems to be a "Bookmaker's Delight."

July 18, August 12, and September 20, are the three dates more or less favored by public fancy at the present time. Thursday, September 20, seems to be the favorite date for those who fancy Otto, son of the late Charles IV, because it is the boy's birthday. He becomes of age on that day.

Two other candidates in the running, however, are no less popular with the people. Prince George, Duke of Gloucester, son of King George V of England, is the second favorite, and he is followed as a close third by the honorable Esmond Harmsworth, son of Lord Rothemere, also of England.

The "Rabid Royalists" of course, are strong for the House of Hapsburg. In other words, Otto, son of Charles. The "Luke Warm" ers" appear to feel that the Duke of Gloucester has an even chance to take over the Hungarian throne, and the balance are touting the son of the English publisher.

Each faction is ready and willing to furnish multiple reasons as to why its candidate is the logical contender, and each is as willing to defend its favorite, come what may.

The Ottoists will not debate their candidate. "There is no reason to argue," they state with dignity. "Otto is a Hapsburg. He is the son of his father. That is sufficient."

The Gloucesterites are equally positive. "An agreement was entered into by the allies—true, Hungary was not consulted—barring the Hapsburgs from competing for the throne," they say. "Therefore, Otto is automatically disqualified. What can be done? Get another candidate. And who could be better qualified than a member of the royal house of England?"

Harmsworth's backers feel that their candidate constitutes a more Democratic gesture, and that he is a business man who can put Hungary on a paying basis. That Hungary will have a king, and that before the year is out, is the general opinion here. But who he will be and when he will become king, remains to be seen.

NATION'S TARIFF BARRIERS FORCE ECONOMIC PROBLEM

By Robert S. Thornburgh

WASHINGTON. — What may become one of the most interesting economic developments of the present day was seen today by government experts as a possibility under the high tariff barriers of United States and many other countries.

This is what might be termed an export of industries by all leading countries. With the American tariff high on about 30 per cent of imports from abroad it becomes less advantageous for foreign manufacturers to distribute their products in United States because of the necessity of advanced prices. The logical development would be the establishment of foreign perfume, toilet preparation, automobile, chemical, rayon and countless other manufactures in the United States which would produce virtually the same article as is made abroad, but avoid the high tariff, and thus place these commodities on a price level that could adequately compete with domestic goods.

On the other hand where high tariffs here may cause other countries to boost duties on a wide range of articles produced in United States, a development expected by many economists as a result of the Smoot-Hawley tariff, American plants might be established in these countries keeping American goods in those markets.

To a certain degree there already has been an export of industries. United States has many plants in foreign countries—automobile, farm machinery and others—especially in Canada. On the other hand Canada has plants in United States. German chemical products and French toilet preparations are made in this country. But the high tariff rates and the prospects of higher ones against American goods give rise to the belief that the tendency may become decidedly more pronounced in a few years.

This development would be a decided advantage particularly to foreign countries because of the large availability of American capital, and the tremendous production power of industries in United States which seek an outlet abroad.

Experts of the government saw no particular disadvantage to the United States. They pointed out that as American plants were placed abroad, additional employment would be created, resulting in higher standards of living, greater purchasing power and thus better markets for American goods.

Where United States would establish plants abroad, or where foreign countries would locate branches of their manufactures in this country, domestic labor undoubtedly would be employed.

Island Meeting Place

On a dot of an island in the middle of the Ossipee lake meet two states, three counties, and four towns. The island comprises an area of only a few square feet, covered with a scant growth of small trees, but it has a singular patchwork of territory including the states of Maine, New Hampshire, the counties of Carroll, N. H., and York and Oxford in Maine, and the towns of Eppingham and Freedom, N. H., and Parnassus and Porter, Maine.

DON'T BE A SLAVE TO LAXATIVES

Mrs. E. Gebbard, 301 W. 5th St., Newport, Ky., says, "My husband and I were actually slaves to laxatives, continually dosing ourselves with something to relieve constipation. Just couldn't stop. It got to be a habit. We even gave our children laxatives in candy form. Little did we realize that we were only aggravating and not reaching the cause of the constipation. Headaches, biliousness, indigestion and constipation still continued.

Our druggist recommended Carter's Little Liver Pills. He said these little vegetable pills would tone up the liver, stir up the bile, which acting as an antiseptic, keeps the food from rotting and poisoning the blood. They are not habit forming and do not roughly cleanse the upper and lower bowel. Laxatives fail to do this. Carter's Little Liver Pills are sold at all Druggists in 25c red paper packages.

SURPLUS FOR LEAN YEARS

Most people will be surprised to learn that dividends and interest payments made last month by American corporations were greater than those made in May of last year. The difference in favor of this year was $80,000,000. The gain in dividends was 24 per cent.

The money, of course, was not all earned this year. A good deal of it represented surplus accumulated in more prosperous years. Corporations make a practice nowadays of putting money in their stocks during times of exceptional profit, on the same principle that Pharaoh followed—in fat years prepare for lean years.

Thus they are able to carry on their stockholders and bondholders for a while, as if conditions were normal.

It is not so easy to carry on labor normally. Millions are out of work because there is no surplus to keep them going. Sooner or later industry will have to make similar provision for them, too.

VENETIAN PROGRESS

Venice, under the Mussolini regime, is "going modern." There is to be a new bridge built to the city from the mainland at a cost of over $4,000,000, which is a lot of money in Italy. There has long been a railroad bridge, but this one is for motor traffic.

A new canal is to be built, too, shortening an important route, and incidentally destroying various picturesque spots.

"The truth is," says a correspondent, "that Venice, like the rest of Italy, is being modernized in a desire to show the world, France especially, that rushing traffic and high buildings denote progress."

So the quiet, colorful old city of the Doges will have automobiles swarming through it—and new roads and bridges all over. The canals themselves are already noisy and smelly with motor boats, and the swell they raise is wrecking the foundations of many an old marble palace and pier.

Poor Venetians! Also poor Americans, who are so modern that they love antiquity. Progress is a terrible thing.

SEASONABLE CLOTHES

This is the time of the year when men envy women.

It's partly make-up, but it's mostly dress. Women have solved the sartorial problem for summer, anyway.

In winter men dress pretty sensibly, and have a good deal to say about the irrational costumes of women. Such criticism may be just, but is futile, because men never know what is good for women and couldn't do anything about it if they did. Women say less about men's irrational costumes in summer.

If it's crazy for women to wear summer clothing the year 'round, isn't it crazy for men to wear winter clothing the year 'round?

PUBLIC CONTROL OF FILMS

A church convention representing one of the leading denominations in this country asks that the motion picture industry be placed "under government control as a public utility" for the moral protection of the American public.

Under the present system, the committee says, our picture audiences, composed largely of women and children, are "receiving false and distorted views of life."

People's "sensitiveness to crime" is lessened and their "standards of modesty and social control" are demoralized.

It must be admitted that there is considerable truth in this arraignment. Yet it doesn't necessarily follow that government control is the best remedy. It can hardly be said that government efforts to uplift public morals in other fields have been so successful in recent years as to encourage further efforts of the kind at present.

There must be some line drawn, of course, against indecency in drama, art and literature. Yet it becomes harder and harder to say just where that line shall be and who shall draw it. When it comes to regulating the morals of a great art industry like the films, probably we had better leave that mostly to the industry itself and to the public on which it depends for its support.

Private criticism, individual and collective, can enforce its own standard of movie morals in the one place where they are found to be most effective—in the box office.

We'll soon see whether Cal is a real columnist. If he is, he'll let his correspondents fill the column for him.

WHERE'S EMILY?

by CAROLYN WELLS

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR. EMILY DUANE and her friend, Pauline Pennington, disappear on Emily's wedding rehearsal day. Emily had gone to visit her hospital, but never arrived there. After leaving the Duane home, Pauline also vanishes. Later, Pauline's body is found in the ravine, and close by, Emily's scarf and six diamonds from the necklace her fiancé, Rodney Sayre, had given her. At the inquest, Jim Pennington testifies that his wife had threatened suicide, but suspicion points to Emily because of the findings.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXIV. "NOT intentionally, but she could have given her a push in anger. Emily wouldn't strike her, of course, but all her life, from a child, when angry, she would push out blindly at anyone who had roused her wrath. She had honestly tried to overcome this habit, but it may have overtaken her. Then, if Pauline was standing insecurely, or too near the rail, she might have gone over from the impact, grabbing at Emily as she went."

"Hush—hush me out. If something like this did happen, Emily would go away and never return. I know her character and temperament better than you do, Rod, and I know, if she had done this thing, she would crawl away to die alone, rather than face us all."

"Dear Aunt Judy, I'm willing to grant this as a possibility, though I can't believe it at all."

"But what other theory, however vague, however far-fetched, can you suggest?"

"I've told you what I think—"

"Yes, but that was before you knew about the diamonds. Emily isn't going to run away to tease you, and then come back to the bridge, for an interview with Pauline."

"Well, you're all wrong, anyway. Then, it comes back to the bandit who attacked the two girls, bungled Pauline over, or she fell over, and he made off with Emily, diamonds and all. Of course, the diamonds you tell of—six, was it?—are but a small portion of the whole. There are sixty-seven stones in the necklace."

"Is it very valuable, Rodney?"

"The best I could get. I didn't want great big stones of inferior degree, so I chose smaller ones that were perfect. Though none is less than a carat."

"The child shouldn't have worn it out in the dusk, alone."

"Of course, she shouldn't. But, she was Emily."

"Yes, she was Emily."

"Aunt Judy sighed, as if they had agreed on some new discovery of crime importance."

"Well, never mind all that. Sayre said, after a pause. 'We must get busy now, deciding on our stand.'"

"What do you mean?"

"I'm not sure, myself, but I think I mean what they call a line of defense. You see, if the police feel about this as you think they do, they will soon be here, and want to search Emily's room and all that."

"Good gracious! What for?"

"Oh, they always do. Is there anything you want to put away beforehand?"

"Merely, yes, crowds of things."

"Such as what?"

"Oh, all her little personal matters. Souvenirs, letters, pictures, you know, her diary, her locked box—oh, heaps of things."

"Heavens, Aunt Judy, you talk as if she were a movie queen!"

"Well, she has had lots of admirers, you know, Rod; and you know what young people are now-a-days."

"I'm one, myself, mamam."

"Of course, you are, and so you know all about this sort of thing. You've been through it all, but probably you destroyed more as you went along. Emily has saved everything, from the days she first came to school. Say, she means to write her confessions some time."

"She can tell her confessions to me."

"Oh, she will. There isn't a

as a friend of this house, I'm making a few suggestions. Let's divide the business that most surely lies ahead of us. As a starter, suppose I take care of the police when they come. They're bound to come, or, if they don't, then I get off easy. You young Gibby, look after the reporters. They're a foxy lot, but you're foxier, and you have a cheerful manner about you that can swing that job, I'm sure. I think the two young ladies can see the callers who come, except those Mrs. Bell wants to see herself. And with her housekeeping cares, that's all Mrs. Bell need look after."

"The kindly blue eyes beamed about, seeming to seek approval, which was readily granted."

"And me?" said Rodney.

"You're the general who sits on his horse in a gold-lace cap."

"I'd love to see a horse in a gold-lace cap!" exclaimed Betty, coming in with Lamb just then.

"They slipped into their chairs, and cast furtive glances at Sayre to see how he was getting on."

"I'm planning plans," Collins resumed, including the newcomers in his glance. "You see, the search for Emily is being put through properly and thoroughly. It is in the hands of skilful organizers and helpers, and they will explore every foot of country for miles around for our girl."

The blue eyes looked troubled, but Abel Collins went on.

"Emily is my godchild, and I shall spare no effort to find her. I have no theories as to her going away. I have nothing to base theories on. So, I can only wait and hope. But there are minor matters that should occur our attention. Here is one. The funeral services of Mrs. Pennington will be held tomorrow afternoon in Hilldale church. Already a lot of young friends of the Penningtons are arranging palms and flowers under the management of the funeral director."

Betty stared, then suddenly choked with stifled laughter, and cried:

"You don't mean Spinks?"

"Certainly I do, why not?"

"But though the redoubtable Spinks was so familiar to Hilldale people as to seem standardized, to Betty he was still the cause for wildest hilarity."

But she restrained her mirth, and went on with her luncheon and Abel resumed his talk.

"What I'm getting at is this," he said. "I don't believe one of you has realized that flowers should be sent from this house, as they will be from nearly every home in Hilldale."

"My sakes!" cried Aunt Judy. "I should say so! You angel, Abel, to think of it! Why, Emily would never forgive me if I neglected a thing like that!"

Human habit is so strong with most of us that Aunt Judy noted no incongruity in her words, if indeed there was any.

"And I appoint you, Betty Bailey, and Lamb Burton, or whatever his name is, to go and select proper flowers and have them duly sent to the church at the proper time."

"Yes, sir," said Betty, dutifully, not overjoyed at the prospect, but willing to do whatever she was asked.

And then the bomb fell.

Prall announced that Detective Lawlor had arrived and wished to see some representative of the family.

"I'll see him," and Abel Collins rose and quietly left the room.

The whole atmosphere changed. Emily's absence was hard enough to bear; the dreadful suspense, the blank wonder, the fearful tracings.

But this was worse. This was a living horror, a black, fearsome serpent coiled, waiting to strike.

DR. COPELAND SAYS—

Diet Indiscretions In Summer Bring Trouble

—Use Common Sense in Choice of Foods

—URGES DR. COPELAND—

Faulty Eating and Drinking Will Inevitably Result in Illness, Warns Authority, "Enteritis" Being a Usual and Troublesome Complaint.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

United States Senator from New York. Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

MOST of our maladies and health troubles are due to faulty diet. In the summer time indiscretions in eating and drinking are causes for a great deal of trouble.

One such disturbance is inflammation of the intestinal tract, known as enteritis. In young children and infants the cause is usually found in the quality of the milk. Older children who eat ice cream, candy, pastry or soda drinks are very apt to be troubled in this way. Or any person who eats bad meat, unclean food or becomes infected by contaminated food handlers may have an attack of diarrhea.

In a pronounced case of enteritis there may be severe pain. A colicky pain is quite common where the lining of the intestine is inflamed. There may be a slight amount of fever and great thirst, and so the tongue may be dry and coated. If the diarrhea continues for some time there will be prostration as a sense of illness. It is always wise to consult a doctor in such cases.

Nervous influenza plays a great part in this condition, too. After slight fright or other similar emotions there may be marked diarrhea.

Typhoid fever, tuberculosis, pneumonia and other infections are accompanied by diarrhea, but, as a rule, it is a passing disturbance, due to some dietetic error.

If diarrhea occurs in the case of a child the milk should be stopped at once. Many mothers, especially new mothers, are afraid their babies may starve to death if the milk is stopped. It is far better to give the child nothing but water for a day or two. So long as the temperature continues your doctor will probably advise against food, and it is good advice.

Colic may be relieved by hot moist compresses to the abdomen, or a hot water bottle, or hot water bath. Frequent enemata will help.

It is a good thing to go to bed and reduce the diet. Many adults suffer from chronic diarrhea or from enteritis. In such cases there is an underlying cause and that must be found by your doctor.

Alexander's Solution

The expression the "Gordian knot" has its origin in the tale of Gordius, a Phrygian peasant, owner of a yoke of oxen, who became king. He dedicated his cart and oxen to Zeus, and the knot of the yoke was tied so skillfully that an oracle declared that whosoever should untie it would be ruler of Asia. When Alexander the Great came to Gordium he cut the knot in two with his sword and applied the prophecy to himself.

"The truth is," says a correspondent, "that Venice, like the rest of Italy, is being modernized in a desire to show the world. France especially, that rushing traffic and high buildings denote progress."

So the quiet, colorful old city of the Doges will have automobiles swarming through it, and new roads and bridges all over. The canals themselves are already noisy and smelly with motor boats, and the swell they raise is wrecking the foundations of many an old marble palace and pier.

Poor Venetians! Also poor Americans, who are so modern that they love antiquity. Progress is a terrible thing.

SEASONABLE CLOTHES

This is the time of the year when men envy women. It's partly make-up, but it's mostly dress. Women have solved the sartorial problem for summer, anyway.

In winter men dress pretty sensibly, and have a good deal to say about the irrational costumes of women. Such criticism may be just, but is futile, because men never know what is good for women and couldn't do anything about it if they did. Women say less about men's irrational costumes in summer.

If it's crazy for women to wear summer clothing the year 'round, isn't it crazy for men to wear winter clothing the year 'round?

PUBLIC CONTROL OF FILMS

A church convention representing one of the leading denominations in this country asks that the motions picture industry be placed "under government control as a public utility" for the moral protection of the American public. Under the present system, the committee says, our picture audiences, composed largely of women and children, are "receiving false and distorted views of life." People's "sensitiveness to crime" is lessened and their "standards of modesty and social control" are demoralized.

It must be admitted that there is considerable truth in this arraignment. Yet it doesn't necessarily follow that government control is the best remedy. It can hardly be said that government efforts to uplift public morals in other fields have been so successful in recent years as to encourage further efforts of the kind at present.

There must be some line drawn, of course, against indecency in drama, art and literature. Yet it becomes harder and harder to say just where that line shall be and who shall draw it. When it comes to regulating the morals of a great art industry like the films, probably we had better leave that mostly to the industry itself and to the public on which it depends for its support.

Private criticism, individual and collective, can enforce its own standard of movie morals in the one place where they are bound to be most effective—in the box office.

We'll soon see whether Cal is a real columnist. If he is, he'll let his correspondents fill the column for him.

"WHERE'S EMILY?"

by CAROLYN WELLS

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

EMILY DUANE and her friend, Pauline Pennington, disappear on Emily's wedding rehearsal day. Emily had gone to visit the hospital, but never arrived there. After leaving the Duane home, Pauline also vanishes. Later, Pauline's body is found in the ravine, and, close by, Emily's scarf and six diamonds from the necklace her fiancé, Rodney Sayre, had given her. At the inquest, Jim Pennington testifies that his wife had threatened suicide, but suspicion points to Emily because of the findings.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXIV.

"NOT intentionally, but she could have given her a push in anger. Emily wouldn't strike her, of course, but all her life, from a child, when angry, she would push out blindly at anyone who had roused her wrath. She had honestly tried to overcome this habit, but it may have overtaken her. Then, if Pauline was standing insecurely, or too near the rail, she might have gone over from the impact, grabbing at Emily as she went. Hush—hear me out. If some thing like this did happen, Emily would go away and never return. I know her character and temperament better than you do, Rod, and I know, if she had done this thing, she would crawl away to die alone, rather than face us all."

"Dear Aunt Judy, I'm willing to grant this as a possibility, though I can't believe it at all. But what other theory, however vague, however far-fetched, can you suggest?"

"I've told you what I think—'Yes, but that was before you knew about the diamonds. Emily isn't going to run away to tease you, and then come back to the bridge, for an interview with Pauline.'"

"Well, you're all wrong, anyway. Then, it comes back to the bandit who attacked the two girls, flung Pauline over, or she fell over, and he made off with Emily, diamonds and all. Of course, the diamonds you tell of—six, was it?—are but a small portion of the whole. There are sixty-seven stones in the necklace."

"Is it very valuable, Rodney?"

"The best I could get. I didn't want great big stones of inferior degree, so I chose smaller ones, that were perfect. Though none is less than a carat."

"The child shouldn't have worn it out in the dusk, alone."

"Of course, she shouldn't. But, she was Emily."

"Yes, she was Emily."

Aunt Judy sighed, as if they had agreed on some new discovery of prime importance.

"Well, never mind all that," Sayre said, after a pause. "We must get busy now, deciding on our stand."

"What do you mean?"

"I'm not sure, myself, but I think I mean what they call a line of defense. You see, if the police feel about this as you think they do, they will soon be here, and want to search Emily's room and all that."

"Good gracious! What for?"

"Oh, they always do. Is there anything you want to put away beforehand?"

"Mercy, yes, crowds of things!"

"Such as what?"

"Oh, all her little personal matters. Souvenirs, letters, pictures, love-letters, her diary, her locked boxes—oh, heaps of things."

"Heavens, Aunt Judy, you talk as if she were a movie queen!"

"Well, she has had lots of admirers, you know, Rod; and you know what young people are nowadays."

"I'm one, myself, madam."

"Of course, you are, and so you know all about this sort of thing. You've been through it all, but probably you destroyed more as you went along. Emily has saved everything, from the days she first went to school. Says she means to write her confessions some time."

"She can tell her confessions to me."

"Oh, she will. There isn't a breath of wrongdoing or wrong thinking in our Emily. She isn't the necking sort and she abhors petting parties."

"You know a lot, Aunt Judy," and Rodney laughed.

"I do know a lot. I learned it so I might be in Emily's confidence and take care of her properly. Well, never mind all that—only I want you to understand that this whole business will be in the papers, of course. Lord knows what the reporters will make of it! But we have to do the best we can. And I don't fancy my family on the spot. I've a Pilgrim father and a Plymouth Rock mother, and something tells me that for them there's no place like home."

"I think so too, Rod. Telegraph or telephone them not to come here, until further notice. I'm going to hold everything in readiness until after the hour set for the wedding. Then—if Emily isn't here—we can make further plans. No guests will come, unless they know Emily is here, and they'll know it if she is. And if some should come, it will do no especial harm. I think the presents should be sent to the bank, at least the more valuable ones, but I don't care. There's a competent protection agency in charge."

Sayre looked at her in real admiration, for he knew her heart was breaking with agony of suspense, yet these details of household management must be attended to, and Aunt Judy was right on the job.

"You're a brick!" he declared, "a real gold brick." Now, come along to lunch; and look here, Aunt Judy, if you and I are the forefront of this campaign or whatever it turns out to be, let's do our best to keep up the morale of the whole kit and boodle of 'em."

"Rod, you're a darling," and Aunt Judy threw her arms around his neck and kissed him soundly.

Luncheon, as it often was at Knollwood, was a continuous performance. Family and guests dropped in as and when they chose and Prall's efficiency and general oversight was never found wanting.

Aunt Judy sat in Emily's place at the head of the table, and Rod at the other end.

Abel Collins was there, and he and Gibby were in deep discussion. The Swami had drifted in, as he acquired most of his meals in such fashion, and the Knollwood menus pleased him.

But afterward he and Nell had gone for a stroll, and Lamb and Betty were off somewhere.

"It seems to me," said Collins, "that about the emptiest phrase that falls from human lips is the one so frequently spoken to folks in trouble when really well-meaning friends say, 'Now, if there's anything in the world I can do, let me know, won't you?' It always makes me mad."

"It needn't," commented Aunt Judy. "That line is all right, Abel. It's because they are willing enough, but they don't know what to do."

"Then they're fools. They ought to know what to do. Now, as a friend of this house, I'm making a few suggestions. Let's divide the business that most surely lies ahead of us. As a starter, suppose I take care of the police when they come. They're bound to come, or, if they don't, then I get off easy. You, young Gibby, look after the reporters. They're a foxy lot, but you're foxier, and you have a cheery manner about you that can swing that job, I'm sure. I think the two young ladies can see the callers who come, except those Mrs. Bell wants to see herself. And with her housekeeping cares, that's all Mrs. Bell need look after."

The kindly blue eyes beamed about, seeming to seek approval, which was readily granted.

"And me?" said Rodney.

"You're the general who sits on his horse in a gold-lace cap—"

"I'd love to see a horse in a gold-lace cap!" exclaimed Betty, coming in with Lamb just then.

They slipped into their chairs, and cast furtive glances at Sayre to see how he was getting on.

"I'm planning plans," Collins resumed, including the newcomers in his glance. "You see, the search for Emily is being put through properly and thoroughly. It is in the hands of skillful organizers and helpers, and they will explore every foot of country for miles around for our girl."

The blue eyes looked troubled, but Abel Collins went on.

"Emily is my godchild, and I shall spare no effort to find her. I have no theories as to her going away. I have nothing to base theories on. So, I can only wait and hope. But there are minor matters that should occupy our attention. Here is one. The funeral services of Mrs. Pennington will be held tomorrow afternoon in Hilldale church. Already a lot of young friends of the Penningtons are arranging palms and flowers under the management of the funeral director—"

Betty stared, then suddenly choked with stifled laughter, and cried:

"You don't mean Spinks?"

"Certainly I do, why not?"

But though the redoubtable Spinks was so familiar to Hilldale people as to seem standardized, to Betty he was still the cause for wildest hilarity.

But she restrained her mirth, and went on with her luncheon and Abel resumed his talk.

"What I'm getting at is this," he said. "I don't believe one of you has realized that flowers should be sent from this house, as they will be from nearly every home in Hilldale."

"My sakes!" cried Aunt Judy, "I should say so! You angel, Abel, to think of it! Why, Emily would never forgive me if I neglected a thing like that!"

"Yes, sir," said Betty, dutifully, not overjoyed at the prospect, but willing to do whatever she was asked.

And then the bomb fell. Prall announced that Detective Lawlor had arrived and wished to see some representative of the family.

"I'll see him," and Abel Collins rose and quietly left the room. The whole atmosphere changed. Emily's absence was hard enough to bear; the dreadful suspense, the blank wonder, the fearful imaginings.

But this was worse. This was a living horror, a black, fearsome serpent coiled, waiting to strike.

No "Perpetual Motion"

If such a thing as a perpetual motion machine were possible, running without fuel or other form of external energy, it would be of immense value to mankind, producing energy from nothing. According to the law of the conservation of energy, however, the energy of the universe is constant and can be neither created nor destroyed.

Revolution in Industry

The term "industrial revolution" is applied to the change in industry brought about by the inventions which distinguished the Eighteenth and Nineteenth centuries. It is a term that is not considered appropriate by some people, but is a well-established phrase.

Moon's Craters

One theory of the formation of the craters on the moon is that rapidly moving meteors penetrated deep into the moon's crust, then exploded and threw up a rampart similar to craters caused on the earth by an aerial bomb.

Hard tennis courts are made of many substances including flagstones, sand, fiber matting, corkwood and even linoleum. There is no official standard as there is in the case of balls and nets.

DR. COPELAND SAYS—

Diet Indiscretions In Summer Bring Trouble

—Use Common Sense in Choice of Foods

—URGES DR. COPELAND—

Faulty Eating and Drinking Will Inevitably Result in Illness, Warns Authority, "Enteritis" Being a Usual and Troublesome Complaint.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

MOST of our maladies and health troubles are due to faulty diet. In the Summer time indiscretions in eating and drinking are causes for a great deal of trouble.

One such disturbance is inflammation of the inside lining membrane of the intestines, a condition called "enteritis." Most forms of enteritis are of the catarrhal type. In simple language, this means that there is such an irritation or inflammation of the mucous membrane of the bowel as to result in an increased flow of mucus. It is just as much a catarrhal condition as a head cold, where there is a marked increase in the flow of mucus from the nose.

Any part of the intestinal tract may be involved in a catarrhal inflammation when there is a disturbance of any one location it is apt to involve the entire intestinal tract. The very common cause of enteritis, with children especially, is the taking of improper food. It may be produced by overeating, and when most people the eating of unripe fruit may bring it on.

Many of us find that some particular food will cause diarrhea, the reason being that that particular food acts as a poison to the intestine.

Answers to Health Queries

M. R. Q.—What is the cause of Vincent's angina?

A.—Predisposing factors are usually present. Tobacco, defective teeth, tartar inflamed gums, oral cleanliness, alveolar abscesses, scurvy, pericarditis stomatitis, trauma of the mucous membranes follow tonsillotomy and other operations in the mouth and out.

M. M. H. Q.—Can sinus trouble be cured? Who should I see for treatment?

A.—Consult a nose and throat specialist for treatment.

Theatres

AT THE CLIFTONA

Maurice Chevalier, the big happiness boy from Paris, whose followers are legion in America, scored a knockout with audiences at the Cliftona theatre yesterday when he appeared in his third American-made picture, Paramount's "The Big Pond," a comedy-drama with music.

There is something about this exuberant purveyor of gay songs and witty dialog that just lifts him miles above his fellow-stars of the films. No matter what the role he essays, he always gives it his best and lifts it up to the grandest heights of amusement value.

In "The Big Pond" the fascinating Maurice is seen and heard of course, as a young Frenchman of poor but honorable family who is suddenly projected into American business. As a guide to a party of Americans in Venice, Maurice becomes enamored of Claudette Colbert, daughter of an American chewing gum manufacturer. Her father and her rival, seeing Maurice as a fortune-hunting "foreigner," concoct a scheme to make him regret that he ever planned to visit the States. They offer him a job in the gum factory. Maurice accepts and shortly afterward finds himself doing the toughest tasks in the plant. But the plot to make his work disagreeable and thus belittle him in the eyes of Claudette, goes awry, for the plotters had not calculated on the ambition and genius of Maurice.

El Hamid, Master of Mental Science, will also be seen in connection with "The Big Pond," today and tomorrow, in an unusual exhibition of mind reading and crystal gazing. El Hamid bears the reputation of being a strange man with a strange power, and his many feats of mystery both amuses and mystifies his audience.

AT THE METROPOLITAN

"Mexicali Rose" the Columbia all-talking drama of love and revenge which opened at the Metropolitan theatre last night is a vivid and accurate account of life on the Mexican border. Sam Hardy and Barbara Stanwyck appear in the feature roles. Erle C. Kenton directed this colorful picture.

The plot revolves round "Happy" Manning, hard-boiled gambler, who is not too hard-boiled to have a soft spot in his heart for his younger brother, Bob. "Happy" sends Bob to college, and believes that he has put him safely on the road to a happy career when he learns that "Mexicali Rose," one of his own discarded sweethearts, has lured the boy into marriage. The gambler does his best to adjust matters—but meets with a tragic result.

Alexander's Solution

The expression the "Gordian knot" has its origin in the tale of Gordius, a Phrygian peasant, owner of a yoke of oxen, who became king. He dedicated his cart and oxen to Zeus, and the knot of the yoke was tied so skillfully that an oracle declared that whosoever should unloose it would be ruler of Asia. When Alexander the Great came to Gordium he cut the knot in two with his sword and applied the prophecy to himself.

Originated by Brewers

Chain stores are known as the multiple shop system. They came into existence at the end of the Nineteenth century. The first were the "tied houses" of many brewing firms, who secured ownership of lease of beer houses and other licensed premises to have markets for their output.

GROCCERS RALLY TO WIN TILT FROM WOODMEN, SCORE IS 9-6

Carl Purcell Makes Bow Before Local Recreation Fans, Tosses Good Ball For Foodmen—Axmen Lose Early Lead.

A rally in the last four innings, Purcell, p. 4 2 2 0 after their opponents had scored six runs, won a victory for the Ind. Groccers at Utilities field Tuesday evening when they defeated the Modern Woodmen by the score of 9 to 6.

During the last four frames the Groccers took advantage of the many errors which were being checked against the axmen and scored six runs.

During the first two or three innings it looked as though it would be a runaway for the Foodmen, as in the first frame they sent five runs trickling across the rubber, and each run as a rule resulted from a nice hit.

If the Woodmen had played ball in the last seven innings, as they did in the first two they would have had the game easily, but on account of that five run lead, they possibly thought that it was unnecessary to play such tight ball.

In the third inning the foodmen started swatting the ball, and the Woodmen outfielders either misjudged or fumbled and in this stanza before anybody really knew what it was all about the Groccers had sent three men around the bases and all reached home.

Then again in the first part of the fourth the Woodmen scored when someone swatted the ball to the right fielder, which he misjudged, and when he did get hold of it made a bad overthrow and the batter made third base. He was later driven in.

Nevertheless, the Groccers started on the rampage and a campaign for more runs and did they get em!

In the last four innings, these Foodmen obtained about seven of their nine hits, and together with a bad throw to first, several bad misuses in the outfield the Groccers sent six runs across the rubber. The Woodmen were dumfounded, in fact so much that they were unable to score any more runs during the rest of the game.

Carl Purcell appeared in the role of the Groccers' pitcher and pitched good ball.

Earl Hall, moundman for the losers, was credited with a strike-out and allowed one man on base.

"RESULTS THAT KONJOLA GAVE CAME TO STAY"

So Says Youngstown Man Who Tells of Lasting Relief From New and Different Medicine.

MR. D. J. LACEY.
Konjola, the new and different medicine of 32 ingredients, is not designed to give mere temporary relief. Its mission is far beyond that. Read the grateful and convincing words of Mr. D. J. Lacey, 664 High street, Youngstown, Ohio:
"I suffered for five years from indigestion, and, as you know, Konjola gave me speedy relief. Now I have returned to let you see that the results Konjola gave came to stay. That was more than a year ago, and since then I have never missed a meal. I can eat anything that any one can. I could not sleep for nervousness, and after every meal came pain, gas and bloating. I hope the news of my splendid experience will reach all who are going through with what I did before I found Konjola."
Konjola works quickly; one does not have to wait long for results, but a complete treatment of from six to eight bottles is strongly recommended.

Konjola is sold in Circleville at Hamilton & Ryan's drug store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.—Adv.

CONTAINERS TALLY EIGHT-RUN RALLY DEFEATING LUTHERANS

Big Landslide of Base Hits, Resulting in Runs, Comes In Sixth After Brotherhood Practically Has Game In Bag.

A great eight run rally in the sixth inning gave the Container Corporation recreation aggregation a 9-5 victory over the Lutheran Brotherhood team at Mason's field Tuesday evening. With the exception of the eighth inning when the straw-board gang added one more run to their total, Roy Dumm, on the hill for the Brotherhood, had the situation well in hand, but in this session the C. C. of A. boys hit balls in the infield that were too hot to handle, lined bingles into the outer gardens and took advantage of several errors to score enough runs to win the old ball game.

The Brotherhood started in nice style and in the opening frame had garnered three runs. They came back with two more in the fifth and things looked very much like a Lutheran victory. But then came that bolt from a clear sky, the C. C. of A.'s eight markers, and the game was decided in the opposite direction.

R. Brungs was on the hill for the winning outfit and although he was hit even more than freely he kept the bingles well scattered in each frame with the exception of the first and fifth. According to the score card, Brungs was touched for 17 base hits. Roy Dumm was hit safely 15 times, one of which was a home run by George Grooms.

The winners' hits were pretty evenly divided with six men collecting two bingles each. Ace Elsea with three hits in the same number of trips to the plate and George Troutman with four safeties in five times at bat led the Lutherans.

M. Rhoades, Lutheran short fielder, was charged with five errors.

Notice to the public

SUPPOSE you are today paying 50c a tube for your tooth paste (and there are many very good dentifrices selling today at that price).

Suppose, like most people, you buy about twelve tubes during a year. Now if you knew that you could buy as good a dentifrice as can be made and still save each year the price of 25 loaves of bread or 60 bars of soap or 40 pounds of sugar or a box of fine cigars—could you conscientiously fail to take advantage of such an opportunity?

That is exactly what you do when you buy Listerine Tooth Paste at 25c for a large tube. Figure it out for yourself.

Future Officers in Uncle Sam's Army

New arrivals at the United States Military Academy, West Point, N. Y., marching, somewhat raggedly, from the gymnasium building to their barracks after they had taken the oath of allegiance to the National emblem. The "Jaydets," whose military career starts in earnest in September, will show marked improvement in their marching rhythm one year from now, when they will parade more decorously.
